DETAILED ACTION

Note: This action is in response to the Board Decision of March 28, 2007.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 112

1. The following is a quotation of the second paragraph of 35 U.S.C. 112:

The specification shall conclude with one or more claims particularly pointing out and distinctly claiming the subject matter which the applicant regards as his invention.

2. Claims 1 and 3-18 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 112, second paragraph, as being indefinite for failing to particularly point out and distinctly claim the subject matter which applicant regards as the invention.

It is unclear in claim 1 line 8 regarding which considering is being referred to, the considering from suppliers of line 3 or the considering of supplier logistics centers of line 5, or the considering of both suppliers and the logistics centers.

It is unclear in claim 7 line 7 regarding which considering is being referred to, the considering from suppliers of line 2 or the considering of supplier logistics centers of line 4, or the considering of both suppliers and the logistics centers.

It is unclear in claim 13 line 8 regarding which considering is being referred to, the considering from suppliers of line 3 or the considering of supplier logistics centers of line 5, or the considering of both suppliers and the logistics centers.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

3. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

4. Claims 1 and 3-18 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Goss (US Patent 6,236,901) in view of Shavit et al. (US Patent 4,799,156).

Goss discloses the claimed methods for ordering material and manufacturing a computer system, Goss discloses that materials/components are ordered from warehouses and/or delivered just in time (see column 6 paragraph 2), but is silent regarding components being ordered based on considering quantities of materials available from suppliers and supplier logistics centers via a computer system.

Shavit et al. discloses that it is well known in the art of supply chains to identify suppliers and distributors capable of supplying materials by considering quantities of inventory available. Shavit et al discloses where buyers can contact suppliers and distributors with requests for quotes (RFQ) which inherently includes quantities desired that are compared to quantities available by the suppliers and distributors in order to determine if the order can be filled with the benefit of providing automated means for procuring desired materials/components. It would have been obvious to one having ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to provide the method of supplying materials and manufacturing computers of Goss with the on-line ordering involving considering of quantities available from suppliers and distributors of Shavit et al., in order to provide automated means for procuring desired materials/components.

Regarding where the order specifies delivery of the material within a specified time period of less than one day, Examiner takes Official Notice that it is notoriously old and well known in the art of supply chains to provide needed items on an expedited schedule such as immediate delivery within a day so that manufacturers can have the needed items quickly or just-in-time.

5. Claims 1 and 3-18 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Goss (US Patent 6,236,901) in view of Southam (US Patent 6,594,641).

Goss discloses the claimed methods for ordering material and manufacturing a computer system, Goss discloses that materials/components are ordered from warehouses and/or delivered just in time (see column 6 paragraph 2), but is silent regarding components being ordered based on considering quantities of materials available from suppliers and supplier logistics centers via a computer system.

Southam discloses that it is well known in the art of supply chains to identify suppliers and warehouses capable of supplying materials by considering quantities of inventory available to provide automated means for procuring desired materials. Southam discloses an on-line ordering system utilizing stock databases (such as database 46) containing stock information pertaining to each warehouse to verify that sufficient quantities of the desired products are available and to locate the closest supply source. It would have been obvious to one having ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to provide the method of supplying materials and manufacturing computers of Goss with the on-line ordering involving considering of quantities available from suppliers and distributors of Southam, in order to provide automated means for procuring desired materials/components.

Regarding where the order specifies delivery of the material within a specified time period of less than one day, Examiner takes Official Notice that it is notoriously old and well known in the art of supply chains to provide needed items on an expedited schedule such as immediate delivery within a day so that manufacturers can have the needed items quickly or just-in-time.
